	Self-determination and independence have not always been achieved by peaceful means. In several cases the peoples of colonial territories have had to resort to armed struggle to achieve liberation and independence. Beginning in the early 1960's in Angola and Guinea-Bissau, the colonial people, under the leadership of their national liberation movements engaged in a struggle to achieve by force of arms what had been denied to them by other means. The armed struggle later spread to Mozambique, Southern

The Special Committee has reaffirmed these views in 1969 and thereafter.

The Special Committee and the General Assembly have since 1966 frequently requested that colonial Powers dismantle their military installations and bases in colonial Territories. 123/In the Programme of Action for the Full

F. Requests to Specialized Agencies and other International Organizations

The Special Committee has also worked with various of the specialized agencies of the United Nations. At its twentieth session in 1965 the General Assembly in its resolution concerning the implementation of the Declaration on decolonization, requested the specialized agencies of the United Nations system to withhold assistance of any kind to the governments of Portugal and South Africa until they had renounced their policy of colonial domination and racial discrimination. 133/ In another resolution relating specifically to territories under Portuguese administration the Assembly appealed to all the agencies, and particularly to the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund (IMF) to refrain from granting any kind of assistance

In 1966 the Special Committee during its meetings in Africa reiterated the above-mentioned requests and adopted a series of morelyt
