

The Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) call for transformative and systemic change, and good nutrition is both a desirable outcome and driver of this change. The UN Decade of Action for Nutrition is an invitation for each of us to innovate and invest our passion in accelerating the achievement of the SDGs. During this event, we will discuss the challenges related to nutrition in rapidly urbanizing world, where unsustainable food production and consumption patterns put our health and planet at risk. We will explore and share concrete commitments for improving nutrition, that can pave the way towards more sustainable food systems, healthier cities, and a better future for all.

How will you help drive the change?

- , Director of Nutrition, World Health Organization (WHO) (moderator)
- , Director General of International Food Policy Research Institute (IFPRI)
- , Director, Centre for Food Policy, City University of London
- , Deputy Director a. i., Nutrition and Food Systems Division, Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO)

UNITED NATIONS DECADE OF
ACTI