The next SecretarGeneral selection process will be critically need the best possible person for the job: a highlyqualified and visionary leader, equipped to deal with the world's crises. The current process continues to fall short of the UN's own principles, basic recruitment standards and current practice at other international organisations:

There is no timetable for the appointment process
The Security Council's "shortlist" for the General Assembly contains just one name
Backroom deals are struck between states and candidates
No woman has ever held the post

A more open and inclusive selection process, with more structure and genuine involvement by all UN Member States and civil society, increases the chances of appointing the Secretaryal the world needs and could give future Secretargeneral a strong mandate. That in turn would boost their ability to mobilise support for the UN and drive forward its agenda. A better process would also help to revitalise the UN, enhance its effectiveness and credibility, and reaffirm its global authority and pappleal.

States should build on the work of the Ad Hoc Working Group and use the Pact for the Future as an opportunity to note the importance of a fair, open inclusive forthcoming Secretaryeral Selection Process. Specific ideas for inclusion include committing

A well structured process: inc. a start date agreed ASAP and a clear timetable for the process with sufficient time for a rigorous process (15 months minimum)

Civil society participationBuilding on the inclusion in the 2016 and 2021 processes, states should work with civil society to identify candidates and bring them into the race. All candidates should engage with civil society and the media.

Financial disclosures All candidates should disclose the extent and source of all funding related to their candidatures along with any other information relevant to possible conflicts of interest General Assembly choice he General Assembly should have a greater say. It shd request the Security Council to present two or more candidates for the General Assembly to consider Female SG / progressive nomination states should only consider nominating female candidates and work together to jointly nominate (including individuals who are not their nationals).

No deals on top jobsStates should desist from extracting promises from candidates and likewise candidates should refrain from making any such promise

Well-qualified candidates The next SG must oversee the successor to the SDGs & be well equipped to advocate for action to address climate change, conflict, human rights abuses & tech concerns.

Transparency at every step: The Presidents of the SC and GA should keep the public well informed of the process; there should be an end to the secret Security Council straw polls. Contingency planningA clear protocol should be established for what happens if an SG's is unable to complete their term of office
